ASU@Lake Havasu provides a residence hall for its students located near the campus itself. In addition to a good location, students here can enjoy all the comfort of air conditioning, private showers, microwaves, and refrigerators. They also have an opportunity to cook by themselves in a room called the Common Room. The kitchen there has all it takes to prepare a good dish. Moreover, all the students have laundry services for free. All of that makes the experience of living in ASU's residence hall unforgettable.

Some of the students shared their thoughts on living in the residence hall:

“...the first time I came here in January 2020, I was surprised by our campus. It's small yet convenient because everything is within walking distance. Rooms are big and comfortable enough to live together with a roommate. My favorite thing about our residence hall is that each room has a bathroom and back room. Big campuses rarely have this privilege. People here are very friendly and helpful, especially to freshmen. Another thing I noticed is that residence hall is actually quiet. There are not many parties here, and it's great, personally, because no one distracts you from studying in your room. We also have a common room with a kitchen, I love cooking there. Living in dorms is surely an amazing experience."
—Danelle Ospanova

“...I enjoy the atmosphere of basically living with all your friends and being able to ask for help whenever you need it or just hang out and spend free time together. Our rooms are only a couple of minutes away from all campus buildings, which is very convenient if you tend to sleep in till the last available second like I do. They are also quite spacious; you get to decorate them as much as you like, and you even get your own restroom which is quite rare for dorms. Another great feature we have here is the common room, where we often make food and watch movies."
—Inna Yakontova

“It is my second semester living at the dorms, and I can certainly say that it has been such a great experience so far. Each campus building is so close that you can easily be there in less than five minutes. Our residence hall has everything we need to live comfortably and focus on studies. I think the most important things are respect and cooperation among students living here so we can all make our dorms better. Also, we have RAs in our residence hall, so we can always seek help from them."
—Assylbek Ali

Featuring single- and double-occupancy rooms with Wi-Fi, cable, and laundry facilities, the Havasu Residence hall is just steps away from campus resources, classrooms and professors. It is also next to the fitness center.

The color pink and its association with breast cancer has become synonymous in the month of October. The simple act of wearing pink may seem small, but the intention behind it is much more significant. Breast cancer is one of the most common cancers in the world, and it is estimated by the National Breast Cancer Foundation that 30% of all new women cancer diagnoses this year will be from breast cancer.

Participating in a display of pink and circulating the message is a reminder for women to regularly perform self-exams as well as get regular mammograms. Early detection is so important because, according to the American Cancer Society, when breast cancer is detected early, and is still limited to just the breast tissue, the 5-year relative survival rate is 99%.

This may seem to be specific to just females, but we must remember that even males have breasts, just without the lactation capabilities. Although less than 1% of male cancers occur in breast tissue, it has been found to be more lethal in men, because of late detection.

If you specifically have a family history of breast cancer diagnoses, it is much more important to continually conduct self-examinations and, regardless of family history, it is something that is better to identify early. For instructions on breast self-examinations or further information, there are a number of available online resources. Thanks to all who wore pink in October!